FEEDBACK PROCESS MANUAL

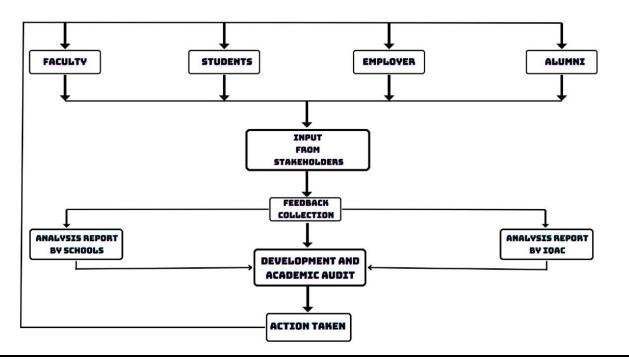

Students, Faculty, Alumni, Teachers, and Employer

INTRODUCTION:

The feedback collection process aims to continuously improve the academic and administrative facilities of the university. This ensures that the students have an enriching experience.

Internal Quality Assurance cell (IQAC), since 2017 implemented the feedback system in the university, to ensure the quality of the curriculum, course content delivery, outcome-based education, teaching, learning, and evaluation, as well as campus facilities (library, canteen, infrastructure, and IT services, among other things). The feedback gathered from various stakeholders (students, faculty, alumni, employers, and Teachers) in order to continuously improve the courses taught and facilities provided.

The distribution, collection, analysis, and action taken of completed feedback forms are done through offline/Online mode once in the year. The feedback template and Action taken Report of remedial actions are posted on the website for stakeholders to comment on.

The institute holds an orientation programme for university students (first-year) students to share the system's working model. Various rules and regulations, code of conduct and other important administrative and academic information.

A structured form are used to collect feedback from all the stakeholders. Feedback from students is also obtained internally by the schools during each semester via interaction with the students by Deans with HOD's/Teachers which also provides anonymity, allowing students to express themselves.

The institute has a registered body of alumni and holds alumni meetings once a year to share their experiences, the progress of the alumni, and to discuss how the alumni can associate with the institute to empower and motivate their juniors. There is also an online alumni network. alumni feedback during is taken on the yearly meeting and whenever they visit the campus. Alumni are regularly invited in the university to deliver lectures /to shar their life experiences.

Time to time Interaction with industry experts via placement, their involvement the various committees allows for an understanding of the industry perspective and their continuous feedback.

Feedback from stakeholders is incorporated in the following processes:

- a. The process of developing a vision, mission, and Educational
- b. Course Outcomes, Programme Outcomes, Programme specific Outcomes.
- c. Identification of curriculum gaps and activities that support the outcomes continuous improvement.
- d. Membership in various academic and administrative committees such as the Governing Body, Academic Council, IQAC, Alumni etc
- e. Stakeholders are invited to participate in admissions, induction programmes, student awareness workshops, student induction programmes, and other intra-departmental meetings.

Feedback Mechanism

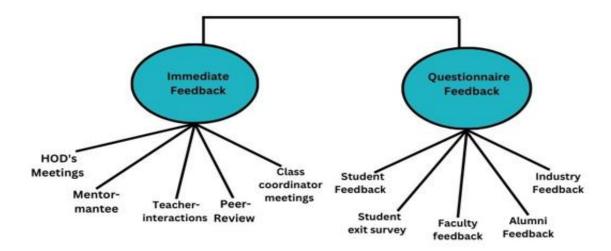

Feedback from various stakeholders is obtained on a regular basis, which helps alleviate academic concerns and motivates students and faculty to improve their performance. The department heads and the principal consider feedback and implement corrective measures/improvements. These are forwarded to management for further action if necessary. Feedback from various sources has significantly improved academic activities, effective use of teaching-learning resources, and professional career advancements for teachers & students.

Feedback on course content delivery and outcome-based education:

Every semester, course feedback is generated from theory and laboratory courses by the schools, Teachers feedback is collected through peer review process too.

Feedback is gathered in two ways: immediate feedback through meetings, reviews, and surveys, which occur as frequently as twice a semester, and annual feedback through questionnaires and forms. Aside from that, we have regular academic and administrative audits, which give us the opportunity to improve in areas where we fall short.

The diagram below provides an overview of two approaches to gathering student feedback.

Based on the feedback collected from the students, the feedback is analysed and corrective measures are taken by the head of the department / principal/Deans.

Feedback on course curriculum:

Since the course curriculum is one of the most important aspects of the teaching-learning process, it is assessed on a regular and continuous basis. Stakeholder feedback is extremely valuable in course curriculum design and development because it provides valuable insights for improving various aspects of teaching, learning, assessment, and capacity. Designing and developing a curriculum necessitates proper need-based inputs as well as expert consultation. The Institute has made all necessary arrangements to obtain appropriate feedback on various curriculum-related activities from students, faculty, alumni, and employers. The phases of curriculum development are as follows:

- 1. Stakeholder feedback
- 2. Feedback analysis
- 3 Requirement analysis
- 4. Board of studies

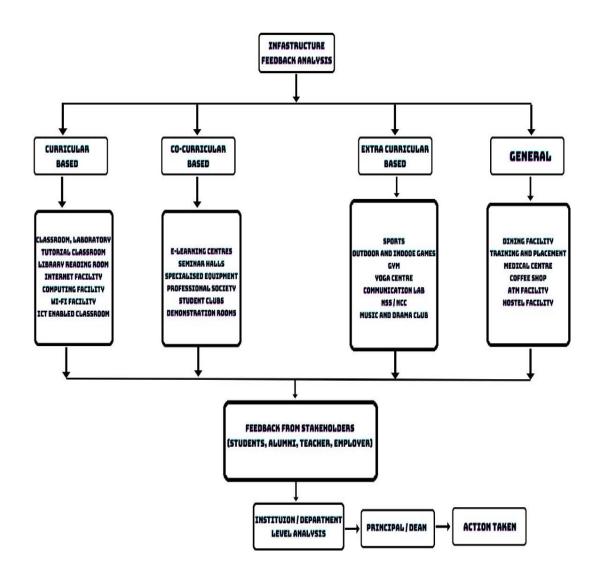

5. Implementation of curriculum

The process of developing course curriculum for various programmes begins with an assessment of the existing curriculum, considering student needs, industry skills, and job placements. The curriculum inspection includes information about syllabus planning as well as overall programme experience. This process of collecting curriculum feedback from our stakeholders is documented once per academic year. Curriculum advancement and audit involve an exhaustive and detailed assessment of the current curriculum, which passes through several stages with the active participation and commitment of students, instructors, alumni, employers and specialists from other Institutes.

Every academic year, students provide feedback on the course curriculum using the prescribed Performa before the end of the semester. The feedback received is duly considered during the curriculum review process. A school-wise meeting is scheduled to evaluate the compiled feedback from all stakeholders. Following a thorough discussion of the valuable inputs provided in the feedback, changes to the curriculum are made while remaining consistent with the existing scheme. Following a thorough analysis of feedback, these changes are proposed at the Board of Studies meeting. On the recommendation of the BOS members, suggested changes are incorporated into the curriculum.

Feedback on Teaching and learning:

The feedback form includes all aspects of the teaching-learning process, including lesson plans, student interactions, clarification of doubts, communication, pace of coverage, subject knowledge, punctuality, and so on. Students must complete an online feedback form. The heads of departments analyse the feedback and communicate the findings to the faculty for improvement. This feedback enables the institute to take counteractive action as needed. It also aids faculty in improving their teaching methods.
